It is a story about luck. Particular situations, solved in uncommon ways. The viewer is led through three different strands that are seemingly not connected to each other. The protagonists meet briefly but marginally in the course of the plot just to resume their own paths then. We get to know Thomas who missed his train to an important meeting. He is almost taken along by a closemouthed driver. And then we have the girl who passes this car with her mother, privily and pleasurable unpacking a Kinder surprise. The connective element is a song, played in the car radio. Then we see the radio host in her studio. The song is over and she is reading out some horoscopes, fitting the protagonists. The next song sets the credits in motion.

Thomas buys himself a coffee at the train station. He is carrying heavy luggage.

It takes him long to fish the one Euro from his pockets.

Likable guy.

One glance at the station clock. He has some time left, leaves the building and sits down in the sun on the forecourt. Next to him, a beautiful woman is sitting, also loaded with baggages (looking more classy), drinking some coffee. Shared looks. When Thomas decides to accost her, she looks at her watch and gets up in order to go to her train.

Classic situation.

He remains sitting, puzzled and annoyed with himself.

Suddenly he looks up at the station clock, jumps up and runs into the train station.

We see her (the woman from before) getting in a train. The train leaves.

Thomas comes out of the train station and grabs his phone.

„Hey, it's me. I just missed my train.

Well, totally overslept!“

He starts moving with all his luggage and approaches a bus station, situated at a two-lane road. Cars rush by. It is quite noisy. He is exerted to understand what his conversational partner is saying. Accordingly annoyed.

„The next one will only leave in two hours.

Man, what if we don't make it in time?“

He desperately grabs his head. The baggage construction starts to disintegrate. He has reached the bus stop.

A red car passes passes by and breaks sharply at the stop. Thomas looks after it. The driver opens the passengers door.

„Wait – I will call you back in a minute.“

He hangs up and approaches the open door.

A man is sitting inside the car, ready to go. He gazes at Thomas, but doesn't say anything.

„Could you give me a little ride? I need to go to Berlin.“

The man nods and unlocks the rear passengers door. Thomas tinkers his luggage on the backseat intricately.

The driver takes a sip of coffee. Eventually, Thomas gets in and the ride begins.

„Man, how fortunate you take me along - just missed my train. Where are you going?“

The driver doesn't answer, but turns on the music. Quite raucously. Now, we see the outside of the driving car and detect the inscription on the driver's door - „Lotto Totto“. Thomas thinks about what more he could say. The driver gives him a silent glance. Thomas turns on his side and closes his eyes.

Pan the the car nearby.

A girl sitting behind the (female) driver. She privily picks a Kinder surprise out of a bag. She opens it with pleasure, eats the chocolate and is happy about the figure. In the radio, the radiosong is the same as in the other car. When it ends, the radio host reads out some of the daily horoscopes. After several words, we can see her in the studio.

„Sagittarius: Today, everything seems to go wrong. But don't quail, there are people who back you up. Everything is going to be alright. Scorpion: The start of a journey is under good stars. Rejoice the small things. Your environment is well disposed to you today. Aquarius: Have faith in your luck today. It will lead you to new insights and interesting acquaintances.

We'll go on after the next song.“
